ANSWER TO UNITY PLEA

A SNAPPING OPPOSITION

Finish to a Bitter, Emotional

OTTAWA (CP) - The scene probably will never be forgotthe 600 persons who crowded the galleries Monday night to see the House of Com-mons, with an emotional outbate to an end.

For 9% hours Canada's elected representatives exchanged passion ate pleas, maudlin memories, angry accu-sations and biting bitterness until, in the early hours of this burst, bring the great flag de-squeezed out the debate.

Closure found Opposition Leader Diefenbaker jabbing an accusing finger and Prime Minister Pearson trying to shout through the Commons din with a final, emotion-charged plea for unanimity. "Why cannot my right honorable friend forget the pas-sions, the prejudices and the bitterness of the fights of the past few months and around this Canadian flag and this country?" the flushed swept up to the galleries. Spec- session appeared almost meltators applauded and sometimes shouted "sit down," participa-tion that is strictly forbidden. Some of the remarks and gestures that were traded on the floor of the Commons are not usually encouraged, either.

"Shut 'up and sit down."
"Don't be crazy." These and similar expressions sprinkled

It was a gradual process that brought the House to a snarling finish. The start of the day's low. Even when the contentious closure motion was proposed, it drew nothing more than a few greetings of "shame." There was nothing loud.

Then the House was off on its final fling on the proposed new Canadian flag.

"This is not a proud begin-ning for a new flag," said Jack McIntosh (PC-Swift Current-Maple Creek) in a mild protest against the imposition of cloa flag to unite the people of Canada," said Lawrence E. Kindt (PC-Macleod), as he continued the Conservative argument against the new design.

Paul Martineau (PC-Pontiac-Temiscamingue), who along with all other Quebec Conservatives voted in favor of the proposed flag, issued a quiet plea for the burying of hatch-leaf flag.

"This is a political flag-not the symbol of our country and our country will be as great as the respect we show to the flag that is ours and ours alone. If Canadians could not overcome current divisions "we do not deserve to survive."

Gradually the arguments stiffened as the day and night wore on, and only occasionally were they softened with a sad backward glance at the Red Ensign. The government "has lost its senses" in imposing closure,

Vital to the Future of opinion regarding the future development of the North Saanich area. It is not an exaggeration to say that these meetings may well prove to be the most important to have been held on this topic in many years; they could have a direct bearing on the lives of everyone in available land, expensive steps Greater Victoria and the surround- remedy errors, a loss and waste

The meetings will enable the Minister of Municipal Affairs to hear briefs on the report of the Capital Region Planning Board of B.C., which lays out a program of orderly development for North Saanich. The program seeks to preserve an invaluable asset—the present rural aspect of the area—while still providing for the expected influx of many thousands of new residents within the next two decades.

Implementation of the board's plan would rule out such promotions as the proposed rezoning of the area east of Dean Park from the two-acre rural category to the half-acre resi-dential. Such an isolated development would be in direct contradiction to the principles of planning advocated by the Capital Region Planning Board, by other experts in the most beneficial use of land, and by many residents of Greater Victoria and adjacent districts who have the future welfare of our community at heart.

A residential subdivision so dropped into a rural area is known as sprawl development. Sprawl creates expensive problems of water supply, sewage, traffic, parks, schools and other amenities, and negates the orderly development of community growth from existing

But the current application cannot be judged only on its specific merits. Rezoning of the area in question would inevitably lead to early applications for similar rezoning in other parts of North Saanich. What the Capital Region Planning Board calls "the main defence zone against sprawl" would be breached; the green peninsula that we know could soon be chopped up into islands of residences in the most disadvantageous way, creating vast problems for the future.

The Saanich Peninsula is due for great development in the years to Every statistical prediction of this week public meetings promises a large increase in popula-will be held to allow an expression tion even within the foreseeable tion even within the foreseeable future. Much of this development can take place without our losing the healthful, pleasant, rural environment of North Saanich if it is directed along planned lines. Hap-hazard expansion can only result in a haphazard result—a poor use of remedy errors, a loss and waste for the community at large.

In its report on North Saanich the CRPB warns repeatedly against the very type of spot development which now is contemplated. "Per-petuating gaps in development by leapfrogging should be avoided"; "the economic, social and physical effects of unrestricted growth have been well documented"; "sprawl is neither country nor city, but often combines the disadvantages of both." And speaking of the threat of ribbon development along high-ways—another eventual effect of sprawl—the report says: "The suc-cess of the residential land use policy will depend to a large extent on whether or not these pressures can be resisted."

As early as 1959 the CRPB was warning: "Sprawl development blocks the best use of land... offers no advantages that cannot be provided more economically and with greater convenience . . . raises the taxes, prematurely increases the value of the land, disturbs the pat-tern of agricultural development and makes the land continually less attractive for farming . . ."

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan
Campbell has the duty of dealing the report, with all that it implies for the future. Naturally he will be under pressure from those who see the situation only as an investment proposition. But there is much more to the future of the peninsula than the provision of business deals, attractive though they may be. It is to be hoped that the minister will remember this fact, that he will recognize the motives of those who wish to see the beauty and value of this unique peninsula preserved through accepted plan-ning methods. The future of the area can be assured or ruined by decisions made now. And this week's public meetings provide one way for the people to take part in that

Winter Visitors-Unskilled

REPORTS FROM VANCOUVER indicate that the seasonal migration of transient workers to the West Coast is in full swing again and that it is greater in numbers than has been the case in recent

The mild climate of the coast along with a relatively high level of prosperity in British Columbia is the lure which brings hundreds of young unemployed people from the prairie provinces and from eastern Canada each year at this time. Unfortunately, most of them bring with them little in the way of skills or training and then tend to wind up on the welfare rolls and as statistics in the unemployment offices. Even in boom times there is little demand for unskilled labor any more.

An unpleasant side-effect of this migration is an inevitable increase in criminal activities, particularly in Vancouver but also felt in Victoria and other urban centres. Some of the transient unemployed, impatient with the lack of jobs and the amount of social assistance available, predictably will turn to crime.

It is not a good situation and constructive nature being done to remedy it. What is pointed up, however, is the need for greater efforts to provide training in useful skills. Perhaps, since this area is a magnet for so many unemployed Canadians in winter anyway, the federal em-ployment officials should give special consideration to the coastal area of British Columbia in establishing more job training facilities.

was in great part an attempt to justify a filibuster which has manifestly failed. It was brilliant in detail, hopelessly illogical when taken as a whole. It convinced the converted, may have steadied a few have steadied a few doubters, entertained Parliament and changed nothing.

To be gay at a fu-neral, is nevertheless. a considerable feåt. As parliamentary achievement, the speech must in all fairness judged against the background of as black a week as the Conservative party has known since the cabinet collapse of February, 1962. In contrast to Mr. Drew's pipeline filibuster, which led directly to destruction of the Liberal government. Mr. Diefenbaker's has discredited and gravely divided his own party. The events of recent days tell their own story.

Western

Attention has naturally been riveted on the open quarrel between English-speaking and French-speaking Conservatives. This is most damaging for if Mr. Diefenbaker cannot work with the moderate, patient and easy-going Leon Balcer—the only French Conservative in decades to achieve any stature in English-speaking Canada, with what Quebec leader can he hope to work?

But this is not all. The Diefenbaker-Churchill filibuster strategy has also an-tagonized some highly-respected Englishspeaking Conservatives. Even before the debate was under way, Mr. Gordon Fairweather, former attorney-general of New Brunswick and one of the most brilliant of the younger Conservatives in the Commons, had publicly expressed his opposition to a filibuster.

Baldwin Position

On Monday last week Mr. Baldwin of Peace River, whose standing with all parties made him a natural choice as chairman of the committee on public accounts, went further. Not only did he call for a decision but in a carefully reasoned state-ment issued outside the House, he declared his inability to oppose the recommenda-tion of the flag committee.

FROM WASHINGTON

MR. Diefenbaker's speech on Thursday the true intent of the filibuster was to force the government to impose closure. It so, the strategy recoiled on its authors. Not only did the debate on the amend-ment die without aid from the government: it ended by making closure (which all parties once condemned) not only respectable but in this case easy. What had the prime minister to fear of closure when he was urged to invoke it by Mr. Diefenbaker's own Conservative desk-mate, Mr. Leon Balcer?

To listen to the leader of the Opposition Thursday, one might have imagined that Mr. Diefenbaker had never heard any of these tidings. For he managed to sound like the Diefenbaker of happier days as he wielded his old weapons of mockery and ridicule, gestures of defiance, taunts which provoked one minister after another, gleeful sallies, and, towards the end, passages of eloquence quite unlike the disordered oratory in which he sometimes seems to take such perverse pride.

No Major Retreat

But what did it all amount to? The principal theme was that the Conservaives, by spirited opposition, had forced the government to retreat from previous positions. Mr. Pearson, after extolling the merits of the three-leaf flag, was now asking the House to accept a different banner with a single leaf.

The only solution was a plebiscite, as commended in certain circumstances by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Sir Robert Borden and Mr. King. This would not divide the nation because it could be so arranged that counting could be national instead of being broken down by constituencies. Mr. Diefenbaker ended with a fervent plea for the retention of the traditional symbols.

It is, of course, true that the flag before the House is not that proposed by the government last summer. But what has happened, in the meantime, to the Conservatives? "What was advanced by our members (of the flag committee) after first standing on the red ensign," said Mr. Diefenbaker, "was a flag consisting of two red bars, one bearing the Union Jack and in the other the Fleur de Lis, and in the centre a maple leaf on a white background . . "Exactly. And what was advanced by the government members, after first standing on the three n of the flag committee. members, after first standing on the three his day opposed a plebiscite for reasons. There has been some speculation that maple leaf flag, was a one maple leaf, which remain valid.

By MAURICE WESTERN

But there is a larger contradiction in Mr. Diefenbaker's argument. The Con-servatives may be entitled to credit for forcing the government to retreat and to accept a committee. But having advocated the committee, they afterwards refused to accept the committee's recommendation, because the members failed to achieve a sufficient degree of unanimity. The solution, they contended, was a plebiscite although in the present mood of Quebec it would seem almost certain that such a vote would achieve even less.

"I believe this with all my heart," said Mr. Diefenbaker, "that if this matter were allowed by the government to stand in abeyance, no one suggesting any retreat or departure or deviation from the parliamentary course; if it were allowed to stand and if at the next general election a number of questions were asked at a plebiscite, then whatever the majority believe ... would be acceptable to all Canadians What an extraordinary passage in a speech devoted to largely an exposition of the government's retreats. Mr. Pearson is assailed for his retreats and at the same time assured that all will be forgiven if only he will retreat again.

Hidden Plebiscite

The strangest suggestion of all, from Mr. Diefenbaker of all people, is the pro-posal that the country should have a hidden plebiscite. A minority will not object to being over-ruled by a majority (or more probably a larger minority) so long as it doesn't know where its votes have gone. Will Quebec, to take the most obvious example, not know how Quebec has Even this proposal is not new. The remarkable thing about the debate on the plebiscite amendment is that Conservative specches have added so little to the case for a plebiscite. Most speakers in fact have found extreme difficulty in relating their remarks to their own amenda The Liberals have been taunted over and over again for remaining silent.

But there is not much point in repeating endlessly arguments already made and documented, such as the fact that Mr. Diefenbaker, for all his praise of Laurier, Borden and King, is one of those who in

The confer as was intended from the very ence, as was intended from the very start, has left a number of important problems, very technical in nature, to be resolved in detailed studies by officials in both countries. It is neither wise nor trate to write of this development as if it marks the end of the American project for a mixed nuclear force. This project, on the contrary, is still very much live, and the British government is now fully aware of the urgent priority which the Johnson Administration attaches to it. Deserve a Chance

The process of reconciling differences between London and Washington-differences which must be seen against a large background of agreement on many im portant matters—will not be helped by hudgings from the press or by demands for early agreement. The experts should have their chance to work their way to patient but enduring solutions.

What is intolerable, even at this stage, that some people should be ready to abandon the multilateral nuclear force merely because Russia objects to it. It is bad enough for the French government to act as if it had a veto over NATO's policies. It would clearly be disastrous to accept the principle that NATO's pro be governed by its ability to avoid a Soviet veto.

If we had listened to Russia's objections, there would never have been any NATO community at all. Starting with the Marshall Plan, Russia has persistently denounced every proposal and resisted every program designed to increase the unity and strength of the Western Alliance. The NATO countries consulted their own needs, not the objections of Russia. That explains their progress, for they acted out of courage and not out of fear. In the end Russia has always recognized this courage and bowed to it. Despite her violent warnings and criticisms, Russia has always come to terms at last with a resolute Western policy. The worst possible reason for abandoning the project for a mixed nuclear force would be our fear that persistence in this project would offend Russia. Fortunately, there is no sign of any such weak spirit in Washngton or in London.

Unimpressive

In the present instance, the Russian case is peculiarly unimpressive. Russia's first objection to the proposed force is that it leads to the spread of nuclear weapons in violation of the understanding reached at the time of the test ban treaty such understanding, either expressed or implied, has ever existed. The Russian case finds no sanction in the terms of the treaty or in the negotiations which preceded its signature. The United States would have hesitated long and carefully before it signed the limited test ban treaty if it had understood that its signature precluded new efforts to strengthen NATO planning for mutual defence. In addition, it will be apparent to most ople, regardless of what Russia now the reckless spread of nuclear weapons nder the proposed international system than under the national use of nuclear Russia, however, refuses to see the blem that way. She refuses to see that West Germany would be under restraints and obligations as one member of a mixed force that would be totally missing if West Germany went on to develop nuclea weapons by herself and for herself.

What would the effect be if Germany were excluded from the mixed force?

Germany would know with painful and humililating certainty that she was not really regarded as an equal member of the NATO community. This sense of diserimination would give Germany a smarting grievance that would make her a more difficult ally for us, and a more dangerous opponent for Russia. This can hardly be considered an encouraging prospect for long-term peace in Europe.

Doubts and suspicions of the multilateral force have deep roots in Congress. The Johnson Administration should be able to ask Congress to consider this plan on its merits regardless of the complaints coming from the Kremlin. The American object must be to win the support of Britain and other allies, not to please the Soviet Union.

University Hospitals

Enthusiasm for the new proposed 410-bed university hospital on the UBC campus is understandable.

However, your editorial on Monday, Dec. 7, sounds like the build-up for a Hollywood movie.

Your statement "This will be the first university hospital in Canada" will come as a surprise to many of your readers. For instance, have you never heard of a small hospital, on the University of Al-berta campus called the "University Hos-It is an 1100-bed complex which has been training nurses, technicians and doctors, pre and post graduates, for many years before UBC had a medical school. Have you not heard of the University Hospital in Saskatoon? There are several "integrated teaching complexes" of this type in Canada and these already have the "world-wide attention" you predict for the UBC University

(Editor's Note: The institution was more specifically described in a UBC release as "the first university-operated campus teaching hospital among Canada's 12 medical schools, and the first univer-sity hospital in North America built on the concept of close integration in training all the medical disciplines".)

Political Maturity

Thinking now of the tensions which built up prior to the United States elec-tions I cannot help but feel the pressure which we, the electorate of a free nation, must contend with in order to retain our mode of life. To think that a man such as Barry Goldwater, whose ideology threatens our very freedom, could achieve the powerful political status which he did in fact obtain makes me thoughful about our individual ideology.

The fact that the American electorate even considered the election of such a personality to the presidency of the United States of America forces me to seriously consider my political knowledgeability.

Perhaps for a moment we should discontinue our rejoicing at the fact that LBJ won the election sider the hard, black fact that some persons did elect to vote for Goldwater.

If the present seemed to exist in a vacuum of immobility and to extend along a path of black dispair would. Canadians have the insight and maturity to resist the ideology of a man or party which promised a perfect state? Are we realistic enough to refrain from putting our trust in a realist? Do we allow ourselves to realize that man is essentially fallible and therefore could ever achieve a state of Utopia?

I propose that we need a better ducation in political ideologies. We can any understand the weakness or potential ability of someone else if we have formed a basic concept of the world situation. This personal ideology must be based on concrete facts and on the ultimate maturity which is the ability to face reality. "THOUGHTFUL STUDENT"

New Angle on That Pisa Slant

WE had both read the short Associated Press item from Minneapolis announce ing the intention of a firm there to send experts to Pisa with a plan to hold the Leaning Tower at its present inclination.

"Think I should offer to help?" I asked the lady. "Certainly," she said, "and I'll come along with you. Anything to exchange this Riviera of Canada's Pacific the coast and we can slip wn to Rome or up to the small problem, though.

for the Mediterranean article in winter. I'll rent a villa on Golfo di Genova on "What?" I asked.

"Who's going to finance this?" she countered.

"Well," I explained, "after my experience in shoring up the chimney at Shawnigan, and holding up that multi-ton concrete base while I did it, the people who own the Leaning Tower ought to hire me as a specialist. I'll charge accordingly and we'll make a penny out of it. Might even have enough to buy shoes and do some other shopping."

"Fine, fine," she answered, "but do the people in Pisa know how good you are? Can you be sure they'll be so anxious to have you that they'll pay?'

"You mean," I asked, "that I haven't publicized that basement and chimney job up at Shawnigan enough?"

"Locally, yes," she replied, "but I'm not sure that you're clipped, translated and reprinted in Pisa."

"You're shaking my confidence," I told her.

"Perhaps," she answered, "but get ready another shake. Come with me." And she led me to the back porch. 'You see that clothes line post?" she asked

"What's the Leaning Tower got on it for So I looked at the pole, which isn't as heavy as some the Hydro people put up, but is heavy enough and I said, "Hmmmm."

she said. "You 'hmmmd' when I told you the stone wall was crumbling and needed repair. You 'hmmmd' when I pointed to the fern that's growing in the eave-gutter. You 'hmmmd' when I asked what you intended to do with the cracks in the sidewalk where the weeds are shooting up."

"Now," she continued, "if you want to impress the people of Pisa, maybe you'd better take some 'before' pictures of that pole, then straighten it and shoot some 'after' shots, I don't think that will persuade them to call you in as a consultant for the tower, but at east it would save my wash from imminent danger of descending into the dirt."

"I thought you wanted to go back to Italy,"

I said. "You're not very encouraging.".
"Certainly I want to go back," she counfered, "I can dream as well as you can. But on your chances of being summoned, I'm not going to shop around for a lot of light dresses and sun hats." Then she turned around and went inside. I followed her silently, the whole Pisa idea collapsing around me,

After a while I broke a sort of chilled "About that clothes line pole," I said, "pretty heavy you know."

Her "Yes" was a bit clipped.
"Replacing it isn't going to be as simple as you think. She said, "No," and began to smile the kind of smile that makes me nervous.

"It'll take a lot of guy wires to hold up and I'll have to dig a pretty deep hole to set it. You wouldn't want me to get out there in the wet mud and slog away in this weather, would you? Might give me pneumonia.

She just kept smiling evilly. "Let's face it," she finally said. "Putting those heavy poles is getting a bit much for you now. I wouldn't want you to get a chill digging in the wet dirt. I wouldn't want you to strain yourself trying to set a log on end to carry the pulley. You don't have to. You've just decided to buy me a dryer—which I've wanted for years. Forget about the Leaning Tower of Pisa. You nearly fell off it the time we were there. I'll think about it fondly. Without it I might never have got a dryer."

... REPORTING

OTTAWA-A sidelight of the flag debate that ecame a political sensation was the defection of most of the Quebec Tories from John Diefenbaker's authority-and this illustrates the basic weakness of our current political lineup.

It is that no party can make very impressive pretentions to being a truly national party. The Conservatives have nine MPs from Quebec-a far cry from the "embarrassment of riches" that Quebec gave John Diefenbaker in 1958-and only one of them, Theogene Ricard, remains loyal to Dief the Chief.

But otherwise, except for Newfoundland, the Tories are not too badly off from the standpoint of regional representation.

On the other hand, the Liberals have only 12 MPs from four provinces and two territories west of the Ontario-Manitoba border, notably no one at all from Saskatchewan.

The Quebec Tories' defection is not from Conservatism, but simply from Diefenbaker It is doubtful if the split can be healed until there is a new Conservative leader, and equally doubtful if a single Diefenbaker candidate could win a Quebec seat in an election soonalthough Ricard acts as though he thinks he

But the Grits aren't much better off. In the West many voters blame Pearson for being "soft on the French," and this, plus the so called "scandals" involving French-Canadian ministers, executive assistants and a parliamentary secretary, doesn't suggest many more western Liberal winners in an election soon.

Thus there is a political vacuum, as Socred leader Thompson pointed out, which lends substance to such reports as that about secret soundings-out on the subject of a Tory-Socred merger into a new "Confederation Party."

* * * I recently talked to a prominent Conservative parliamentarian in this vein, and when I mentioned the name Manning his eyes lighted up like a Christmas tree.

"If only we could recruit Manning," he said, "and then Fulton and Roblin and Robarts and Stanfield, and put together a cabinet of all the

It was a fascinating idea, but quite as un likely as the idea of melding the Socreds and the Tories, with or without Diefenbaker, into a national party. This is a much more difficult and complex operation than the metamor-phosis of the CCF into the NDP—and the reaction of true blue Tories to efforts to force them into bed with "funny money crackpots from Al-berta" might be enough to make the Grits again the national party that they once were. You don't throw away a century of tradition lightly, for some gimmicky appeal, and expect that the total in vote appeal is going to be the sum of the two parts—or parties.

But nevertheless the parliamentary stalemate, the shift of real power from Ottawa to the provinces, and the deficiencies of both Liberals and Conservatives as national parties all sap the strength of the central government and weaken the nation.

The country needs a return to majority government, with two parties of national character facing one another in the Commons. But with both Grits and Tories fighting over the same middle-of-road ideological ground, they only weaken themselves and encourage the growth

These five exclusive features from Rambler go a long way toward taking the worry out of winter driving, Inside, outside, underside . . . Rambler for '65 is solidly protected against snow and salt,

1. Double Door Seals, Great idea! Two door seals act as wind-proof insulation against chilly drafts. 2. Ceramic Armoured Muffler. While you're warm inside, don't worry about the under-side of your Rambler. The exclusive muffler, tailpipe and exhaust system is made of tough galvanized etal bonded with long-lasting ceramic materials to resist rust and corrosion. Drive through slush, and over salt. Rambler's Ceramic Armoured Muffler beats the worst conditions,

3. Fibreglass Roofliners. In addition to Double Door Seals, Rambler keeps you warm with special interior roof materials that act just like the insulation in your home. In winter, warm air is kept in. In summer, it's kept out.

4. Deep-Dip Rustproofing. Here's another thing that's kept out of Rambler: rust. Rambler Deep-Dip Rustproofing is the world's most effective rustproofing. Every '65 Rambler body is deepdipped into six separate tanks to scour, cleanse and purify the metal's surface. Then it's submerged right to its roofline in rustproofing primer. Rustproofing seeps into every square inch to completely protect Rambler against corrosion and rust.

5. Double Safety Brakes. Front and rear brakes work independently. If tough driving conditions cause one set to go, the other continues to operate. You get the insurance of extra wintertime stopping-power. A Rambler exclusive.

6. Now, think about it. Why go all the way to Mexico just to get away from winter driving, when Rambler makes it so comfortable and worry-

Rambler for '65 gives you more, too. For example: Weather Eye, the best heating and ventilating sys-tem you can buy; a battery-saving alternator that charges even while your engine is idling; Rambler Power-Guard, a rugged heavy-duty battery; allseason radiator coolant; plastic kick panels to resist snow and slush tracked in by drivers and passengers.

Five ways out of six. That's certainly a winning combination. You win. Winter loses.

Thant's report said that in the absence of progress toward a political settlement in the dis-pute between Greek and Turkish-Cypriot factions, there seemed to be no reasonable alternative to keeping the force on the island.

COUNCIL TO DECIDE

An aide said a Security Council meeting on the recommendation would probably be held next week, after Thant's release from hospital where he is re-covering from treatment of a peptic ulcer.

Thant said that in the last three months a cease-fire between the two Cypriot commu-nities has, in general, been observed in good faith. But the basic factors of the situation and the attitudes of both sides remained unchanged, he said. The life and economy the island remained dis-sted "and it would be unrupted realistic to expect any radical improvement until a basic political solution can be found.

Thant said the role of the force, in the absence of progress toward a political solution, would produce diminishing re-sults and eventually a stalemate Thant estimated the cost of the peace-keeping operation for the nine months at a net $15,700,000 (U.S.). He said voluntary pledged contributions totalled $15,800,000 from 31 overnments. He said the force would cost another $6,100,000 if the Security Council approves extending it three months.

'Bill Juggling' Family Pastime For Veterans' Hospital Orderlies

Nursing orderlies at Veterans' Hospital are angry. They are angry at the federal government's treasury board which hasn't granted

Santa May Like These As Stocking Stuffers

Penny recalls many hours of pleasure seated in front of Dad, when she was younger, listening intently to the stories of Enid Blyton. These books, containing such favorites as the "Biggles" series, seem to delight children of all generations with their fresh adventures of the intrepld Biggles in trains and other vehicles.

Now, these books are available in pocketbook form for children, and sell for 60 cents. These are gift or, as a suggestion to Santa, to stuff a stocking.

Educational books for the older child present a vast world of knowledge in old books which have been reprinted and illustrated. Some of them are the "Old West" and "Trolley Car Treasury," selling for $4.29.

History comes alive in the "Great Stories of Canada," a series featuring stories about the famous and infamous personalities and events of Canada's past. One book in particular is "The Map Makers," telling of the young adventurers who penetrated the vast bulk of Canada to explore and settle. These are priced at $2.75 for a hard-cover edition.

Non-fiction stories dealing with everything from science to history are perfect for the younger child. The hard-bound books are of the Ladybird set and have an illustration on one side and text on the other. Price is $2.90.

sweet spices is part and parcel of cherished Christmas traditions.

In fruit cakes and cookies, in aromatic desserts and candies-cinnamon, mace, cloves, anise, nutmeg, cardamom and ginger add to old-fashioned delights in every holly-decked home.

Variations on a pungent theme might be a citrus cheesecake, exciting with cinemon, nutmeg, almonds and grated orange peel.

Or, perhaps, a particu-larly interesting Puerto Rican Christmas cake, subtle and delicate with orange flower Spiced nuts, candies and fruit peels, too, will add to the pleasure of the Twelve Days of Christmas.

CITRUS CHEESECAKE (One 9-inch cake)

11/2 cups graham cracker

11/2 teaspoons ground cinna-¼ cup sugar

1/2 cup finely chopped al-monds

1/4 cup melted butter or margarine

1/4 teaspoon salt 3 pkgs. (8-oz. each) whipped cream cheese

DEAR ARRY: Our son, a colege sophomore, was driving one night when he was side-swiped by a truck, and a horrible acci-dent resulted. His date (a college freshman) was badly injured. They still don't know how much plastic surgery will be required to restore her face to a presentable appearance. For mately, our son escaped with esser injuries from which he will recover in time, but they are both still hospitalized. Naturally, we are sick over this and are assuming all the bills. Her parents said to us, "Now that your son has disfigured our daughter for life, the least he can do is marry her!"

DEAR CONFUSED: Climb upor

your father's knee, Sonny Boy, and ask him to level with you.

You're old enough to know.

They had been dating, but not steady. And we know that our son had no thoughts of marrying this girl or anyone else. (He's only 19). We are afraid these parents will try to conour son that he has a moral obligation to marry their daughter. He is a sensitive, emo-tional young man. How should this be handled?

HIS PARENTS DEAR PARENTS: Let your on know that he might be an proached with this suggestion, and explain that for him to marry the girt solely out of a feeling of obligation or guilt would be a terrible mistake.

The reason is simply because of the ratings which have slipped ominously eason. ABC-TV was the major contributor in bouncing the CBS-TV polls The loss of ratings has naturally led fo the threatened loss of sponsors who are needed to support and finance the

Monday night, "CBS Reports" Stephen moved permanently into the slot vacated by "Slattery's People" (10-11 o'clock). "CBS Reports" was formerly seen on Wednesday nights and its move to the late hour is another example of program shifts to cater to the teen set. "Slattery's People," with Richard Crenna as a state legislator, will move on Christmas Day into the Friday night 10-11 o'clock slot now occupied by "The Reporter." "Reporter" has been cancelled, as has "Mr. Broad-

It is hoped the Crenna series will benefit from the lead-in audience of CBS-TV's new comedy hit, "Gomer Pyle." But then, so did "The Reporter."

The CBS-TV statement regarding schedule changes entioned "certain changes in format" for "Slattery." This, again, could mean some changes to make it more attractive commercially.

The early Wednesday slot being vacated by "CBS Reports" will be filled by "Mr. Ed," the series with Vancouver-born Alan Young and his talking horse.

"Mr. Ed" had been stabled in prime time Sundays. To belp out on Wednesday, also, will be "My Living Dolf," with yummy Julie Newmar. "Doll" has been getting trounced by NBC-TV's "Bonanza." Both the horse and robot shows hopefully will provide a stronger lead-in for "The Beverly Hillbillies," which dropped from the top 10 list this season.

On Saturdays, starting Jan. 2, "Mr. Broadway," as nounced previously, will be replaced by "The Entertainers," now a Friday variety hour. The Friday hour will be filled, starting Jan. 1, by "Password" and "The Baileys of Balboa," which now are seen Thursdays. Filling this Thursday spot, beginning Jan. 7, will be the summer replacement series, "On Broadway Tonight," which is like the old Talent Scouts and is hosted by Rudy Vallee.

The Tuesday night "World War I" documentary series will be shifted Dec. 20 to Sundays, out of prime time, between "The Twentieth Century" and "Lassie," early in the evening. The Tuesday spot will be filled by Joey Bishop's series on Dec. 22; it is now seen on Sundays and, like "My Living Doll," has been getting beaten by "Pennara". beaten by "Bonanza.

How is CBS-TV to fight the reigning Ponderosa

It is going to toss in Danny Thomas' reruns and panel show, "The Celebrity Game," with Carl Reiner starting Dec. 20.

OTTAWA-The Senate banking and commerce committee voted Monday night against the granting of a charter to Premier Bennett's proposed bank of B.C.

The committee's vote has the effect of killing the bill incorporate the bank. The Senate committee vote of 17 to 7 against the grantof the charter was decided despite a last-minute offer by Premier Bennett to withhold all government investment in the bank until the Bank Act is revised next year. The committee vote was taken on a resolution by Senator A. K. Hugesson (L. Quebec) which declared the charter bill should not pass because provincial government ownership of shares could lead to control of a federally-chartered bank by a province. Senator Wallace McCutcheon (PC Ontario) strongly against the bill, claiming assurances given by B.C. that its investment would be limited were insufficient.

Senator Arthur Roebuck (L-Ontario) said the bill to incorporate the bank of B.C. should be treated exactly as those passed by the Senate this session—the Bank of Western. Canada and the Laurentide Bank.

B.C. Attorney-General Robert Bonner told the committee this was the first time parliament had ever been asked to approve incorporation of a bank that would be entirely

House Approves Red Maple Leaf By 163-78 Vote

OTTAWA (CP) - One of the longest and most bitter debates in modern Canadian parliamentary history ended at 2:12 a.m., EST, today when the Commons voted 163 to 78 to give Canada a red-and-white maple leaf flag.

The final vote, brought on by the government's use of the debate-shutting closure rule, came after a fierce clash between Prime Minister Pearson and Opposition Leader Diefenbaker that shocked-the packed galleries.

Meanwhile, Opposition Leader Strachan this morning publicly called on the provincial government to introduce legislation at the next session of the legislature to set up "a socialized banking system in B.C.

Council President George Meltraith introduced the rarely-invoked closure motion. He had given notice of this Friday.

Forced to a formal vote, closure was adopted 152 to 85 with 31 opposition members supportives marched angrily through the rear curtains. One of them, Chester MacRae (York - Sunbury), remained seated for about a minute before wheeling into the aisle to stamp out. 'Call them treasury branches

Backs Maple Leaf By 163-78

OTTAWA (CP) - One of the longest and most bitter debates in modern Canadian parliamentary history ended at 2:12 a.m., EST, today when the Commons voted 163 to 78 to give Canada a red-and-white maple

The final vote, brought on by the government's use of the debate-shutting closure rule, came after a fierce clash between Prime Minister Pearson and Opposition Leader Diefenbaker that shocked the packed galleries.

Today the Senate opens de-bate on a government - sponsored resolution seeking its endorsement of the new flag as a replacement for the Canadian Red Ensign, never formally recognized but flown for years as the country's national emblem.

So far this year she has shipped only 500 trees.

Mrs. Brown said Vancouver received so many poor quality trees in the past, more and more people are buying imitation trees.

Best local trees are shipped to the U.S. One reason private lands are not so readily available is that people have cut but not taken out all the culls.

Charter Application

Killed by 17-7 Vote

(Times Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA-The Senate banking and commerce committee voted Monday night against the granting of a charter to Premier Bennett's proposed bank of B.C.

The committee's vote has the effect of killing the bill

The Senate committee vote of 17 to 7 against the granting of the charter was decided despite a last-minute offer by Premier Bennett to withhold all government investment in the bank until the Bank Act is revised next year.

The committee vote was taken on a resolution by Senator

A. K. Hugesson (L.-Quebec) which declared the charter bill should not pass because provincial government ownership of shares could lead to control of a federally-chartered bank

Senator Wallace McCutcheon (PC - Ontario) spoke strongly against the bill, claiming assurances given by B.C. that its investment would be limited were insufficient.

Senator Arthur Roebuck (L-Ontario) said the bill to incorporate the bank of B.C. should be treated exactly as those passed by the Senate this session—the Bank of Western Canada and the Laurentide Bank.

B.C. Attorney-General Robert Bonner told the committee

Said Mrs. Brown: "It would take twice as long to harvest the trees as the land available is so spread out." and haul the trees to their own selling lots.

"Stumpage rates go fron 25 to 50 cents a tree and that's high when you can only get 85 cents or $1 for a tree—and we have the cost of shipping them."

Mrs. John Shearing, of Cobble Hill, told a similar story.

Three years ago she and her husband shipped 30,000 trees; last year it was only 17,000 and this year the total is 15,000. The Cowichan area has been overcut in the past six years.

Mrs. Shearing said one bright sign was that the big logging companies were ex-perimenting with allowing Christmas trees to be cut as part of a thinning program in their plantations. North Cowichan council hasn't granted any Christmas tree licences on its for-est reserve. Their forest land is now leased in 10 woodlots. Granting licences for tree cutting is up to lessees.

DUNCAN - Parking meters are making news again in

In city council Monday, Ald Hamish Mutter said 146, almost had the meters, had been broken or damaged in the two-month period to Dec.

He suggested either special patrols or a reward for arrest of vandals.

In court Monday, school teacher Peter Clark, Brentwood College, successfully contested a parking ticket. He called Ald. Mutter as a defence witness. The alderman agreed the meters could Magistrate D. K. McAdam said the Crown failed to prove the time of the alleged violation and dismissed the case.
